Calling all Local Businesses!

The Georgetown County Library and S.C. Works Waccamaw are holding a Job Fair on Saturday, February 9th from 10 a.m. until noon, and invite local businesses to attend.

“The more, the merrier,” said Library Director Dwight McInvaill. “There are census tracts in our community where unemployment now exceeds 33 percent. With this job fair, we hope to give workers and businesses a chance to meet each other, with less pressure than an interview setting.”

The job fair, held at the Georgetown Library on Cleland Street, will also offer a “resume doctor,” assistance with online job searches and applications, one-on-one interview practice, information about continuing education, and a business fashion display

“Our inaugural job fair, held six months ago, was really gratifying, with 150 participants and 14 businesses,” said McInvaill. “We hope to bring even more people and groups together this time. Georgetown County is combating the recession one job at a time.”

Businesses that would like to attend the job fair can email librarian Heather Pelham at hpelham@gtcounty.org or call S.C. Works Waccamaw representative Aaron Johnson at (843) 546-4231. The job fair is sponsored by the library, SC Works Waccamaw, and a Smart Investing at Your Library grant from FINRA and the American Library Association.
