David Maring

Maring is a retired circuit court judge who combines his legal experience with his military training and a strong southern biblical background to create spellbinding, can't-put-down suspense/thriller novels.

His novels are often set in the Lowcountry, and run the gamut from historical fiction to murder and intrigue.

Maring will talk about his popular historical fiction, Winyah Bay.

"The story of Winyah Bay is one that has lain hidden for many years," Maring says. "In my book, a recent archeological excavation finally uncovers its secrets. The story of the unforgettable people of the bay is revealed in a mixture of history, romance, and the triumph of the human spirit."

The book spans from prehistoric life with the Pre-Clovis people to the establishment of a doomed Spanish settlement and the arrival of the first British traders.
